The Mountains Tower High Above Us
Their Summit, a Challenging Goal

Introduction

As the boys of Mercersburg gaze on the surrounding scene, their eyes of necessity must be attracted to the school's happy location on the eastern approaches to the Allegheny mountains. The Tuscarora range forms the western boundary of the setting. From Mt. Parnell in the north to Two Top and the Corner in the southwest the inspiration of beautiful and challenging mountain scenes gives impetus to a physical desire to reach the summit.

So it is with a Mercersburg education; as the Tuscaroras challenge the student to climb, so does the life of the academy challenge the student to raise his sights and move upward in his desire to achieve success in his preparation for college and for life.

Sir William Watson so aptly summarizes this challenge in his appreciation of Shakespeare and so we quote him as the theme and inspiration for this seventy-first KARUX.

O let me leave the plains behind,
And let me leave the vales below!
Into the highlands of the mind,
Into the mountains let me go!

Senior Class History

The Class of 1964 came to Mercersburg during a time of transition. Dr. Tippetts had just left, Mr. Fowle was about to come, and Mr. Jacobs was serving as acting headmaster. We were no different from any other incoming class—merely a group of young boys thrust into an unfamiliar society, and not at all sure of ourselves. We quickly assumed the attitudes of the "old boys". We slipped into the life of the school—wore tennis shoes with our jackets and ties, found grubby ties for the day before vacation, complained about the food and cursed the laundry.

Mr. Fowle arrived here in the spring of our first year, and the air was rife with rumors of this change and that change. Of course, there were no changes right away, but they did come gradually, the next year, and the year after. We saw the school building a new auditorium, and planning a new dining hall. We petitioned for more privileges, and we got some—we got library privileges; we got weekends; we got a few other things, too, and often we just got discouraged. Out of our discouragement came the Honor System, and out of the Honor System came new hopes, if not for ourselves, at least for the future.

We've seen changes, and helped to bring them about, but we're really not too different from any other class. We've had our share of athletes and our share of scholars, and, of course, a good-sized crowd in the common room. We've cheered for our teams and seen them win, and we've cheered for our teams and seen them lose; and sometimes we didn't cheer at all, but instead complained about school spirit. We've taken our places in the school activities—some of us have moved forward, some of us have moved backward, and some of us have just passed the buck for another year.

And when we grasp that coveted diploma we'll still be just like any other class, saying "Thank God" and wanting to get away just as fast as we can, and yet regretting all the friendships that we'll never be able to further. And, trite as it may seem, in a few years we'll be looking back and thinking how great it all was—laughing about all that guard we got, even though it didn't seem too very funny at the time, and thinking that that teacher we used to hate so really wasn't too bad after all. We'll remember the greatest, and probably the last, penny Sunday in history, a coup d'etat in a club, the snowball fights, and everything we used to get away with, but never what we got caught at. And we'll be saying, "The kids today don't do nearly what we did."

That's the way it always was, and probably the way it always will be. We have been a part of Mercersburg, and now we leave and are no longer. But Mercersburg is now a part of us. We have lived here and grown here, and in our growth Mercersburg has molded us. Today our presence here is very real. Tomorrow we are gone, with renewed hope, embarking on a new venture, a little the wiser, for our Mercersburg venture. And so we now must seek a new life.

Cum Laude

The Cum Laude Society, which corresponds in dignity and honor with Phi Beta Kappa in the college world, is an honorary scholastic organization on the preparatory school level. In two initiations a year the outstanding scholars of the senior class receive the diploma and badge which signify their excellent achievement in academic pursuits.

This society has chapters in more than a hundred schools similar to Mercersburg, whose membership is composed of charter and other members from the faculty and a maximum of twenty per cent of the graduating class who have completed at least a two-year course at Mercersburg and maintained a high school scholastic average. This does not apply to a senior who has completed three years only of a four-year high school course before entering the academy.

The charter membership of the Mercersburg chapter consists of ten members of the faculty and the valedictorian of each class for the twenty years prior to the founding of the chapter. Mercersburg's charter was granted during the academic year 1929-1930.

The first group chosen for membership each year is initiated in ceremonies at a morning assembly shortly after the opening of the spring term. The second group receives this recognition on the commencement stage. This, one of the school's highest honors, is a fitting climax to a career of successful school work.

The present roster of the academy chapter includes: From the Faculty: Mr. William C. Fowle, President and Headmaster; Mr. Stephen J. Szekely, Latin Department Head; Mr. David M. Tyson, Mathematics; Mr. Walter H. Burgin, Jr., Head of the Mathematics Department; and Mr. Richard R. Schellenberger, English Department Head and Society Secretary.

Chosen in March from the Senior Class in Course: Marc L. Abrams, Alan M. Brody, Richard W. Cass, Lawrence F. Himes, Michael J. Pertschuk, Gary N. Sherman, James A. Talerico, John W. E. Treat.

June, 1963, initiates into Cum Laude receive insignia and congratulations at outdoor commencement ceremony.

Retired

At the annual June commencement in 1963 the headmaster paid tribute to and honored two retiring members of the staff because of their long and devoted service to The Mercersburg Academy. Mrs. Clarence L. Charlton, hostess in Traylor Hall, and Dr. Lewis H. Hitzrot, school physician, received suitably inscribed gifts of silver, thanks from Mr. Fowle, and applause from those present.

Paying tribute to the retiring hostess, the headmaster stated that first impressions of a school are important and that Mrs. Charlton at the front desk of the academy with her gracious charm had never ceased to create for visitors an opening impression of the school which was warm and welcoming.

Mrs. Charlton, who came to Mercersburg in 1926 as the bride of a faculty member (also now retired), nine years later became the hostess in Traylor Hall and served in that capacity for 28 years—years of loyal and devoted service.

Boys, parents, casual visitors, regents of The Mercersburg Academy, thousands of alumni from all over the world miss the hospitable and charming greeting of Betty Evans Charlton at the front door of the academy.

Another devoted friend and assistant of Mercersburg boys has left the campus, and so another part of the campus lacks something—his sympathetic and kindly understanding of young men. Dr. Lewis H. Hitzrot is no longer at his post in the Mercersburg infirmary. The headmaster noted this loss to the academy when he paid tribute to Dr. Hitzrot's valuable service.

Lewis H. Hitzrot served Mercersburg loyally and well from 1936 to 1963. He was the first full-time resident physician on the academy staff, and his contribution to the general health and welfare of the school over this period of time would be difficult to assess. His contribution to the general life of the academy and his contribution as a citizen of Mercersburg were of the highest order. A patient and understanding physician, a wise counselor, and a loyal faculty member is missing from the school scene.

Jesse Houpt

From time to time in the routine life of an organization there occurs an event which causes the life of that organization to pause, to take note of some loss or dislocation, and to appraise what that loss or dislocation means to all those whose daily lives are bound up with that organization.

Such was the case early Saturday morning, October 12, 1963, when Mercersburg faced the loss of a beloved individual whose contribution to the life of the school over a long period of time was difficult to estimate. This sad and dislocating event was the sudden death of Jesse Leroy Houpt, aged 58, steward of the school, a man who had been a real part of the academy's picture for many years.

The Mercersburg family was shocked and saddened by Jesse's passing and paused to pay tribute to his memory, which will linger long in the hearts of Mercersburg boys.

A son of Carl Valentine and Wilhelmina (Furry) Houpt, Jesse came to the academy in 1923 as mail boy, "fleet foot" or "fleet" the boys called him in his early years in tribute to his speedy handling of their mail. When World War II came along, Jesse went into the Navy and served for 42 months in various capacities. He returned to Mercersburg in 1946 as assistant to the dining room steward and succeeded him in 1957.

Surviving are his wife, Virginia M. Houpt, assistant to the school librarian; a son, Michael, presently a student at Mercersburg; two brothers; and two sisters.

The Mercersburg News summed up its estimate of Jesse's life and service in these words: "Jesse was always genial, helpful, friendly, and faithful to his work . . . The world of men could do with more of this geniality, helpfulness, friendliness, and devotion to duty."

Mercersburg will long remember the contribution of this man to the daily life of the school over many years. He was an important part of that life and truly identified with the daily work and progress of the institution.
